LOCAL LIBERTY COUNCIL ACCUSES SALOON KEEPER OF DISLOYALTY

After having been compelled to close his saloon for two days, under charges of disloyalty and violations of the city ordinance governing the sale of liquors, Charles Luscher, proprietor of the Del Monte on Main street, was permitted to resume business by an order passed at an adjourned meeting of the city council on Wednesday evening. The order rescinding the suspension of the license, however, was not made as a dismissal of the charges but as an admission that the evidence so far produced was not sufficient to warrant the revocation of the license.

The charges against Luscher, and upon which the order suspending the license was made, were presented to the trustees at their regular meeting Monday evening by the local Liberty Council, many of the members of which were present at the meeting. In asking for the revocation of the license, the Liberty Council, through R. F. Chilcott, gave expression to the sentiments which prompted the action as follows:

"Board of Trustees, Redwood City, Cal., Gentlemen:

Suppression of all acts tending to arouse or foster a spirit of disloyalty, we believe, should be the duty of every American citizen, and as a body of loyal Americans, we, the Liberty Council of Redwood City, submit to your Board the enclosed affidavits with the request that you take action thereon in a manner that best befits the offense committed, namely: the revocation of the liquor license now standing in the name of Charles Luscher, proprietor of the Del Monte Hotel.

We believe that any action, whether so or by right of birth or naturalization, who finds that the display of the American colors in his place of business is offensive, even to a small degree, is not a true American and is unfit to enjoy any of the privileges granted by reason of such citizenship, particularly at this time when the best efforts of all of us are needed to foster and keep alive the spirit which will make for a solidarity of effort in the struggle for democracy and particularly for freedom from influences foreign to the traditions which we, as Americans, hold dear.

We have determined, after a thorough investigation, more than enough to show that the offense of Luscher entitles him to (for his guilt was early in evidence) that your Board should take cognizance of his disregard for the flag under which he has prospered and mete out to him the punishment which disloyalty demands—an order directing that he surrender the rights he obtained under a pledge to support and honor the government of the United States.

The incident of the flag we maintain as sufficient to provoke this action on the part of your Honorable Body. Further evidence of Luscher's disloyalty, however, is offered through the affidavit showing his evident interest to disregard the local ordinance governing the sale of liquor in packages, an offense at this time particularly dangerous to the men of the United States army quartered in our midst, for whose protection the ordinance was drafted.

Accompanying this communication and presenting the charges upon which revocation of the license was asked, were two affidavits. In the first of these, which was made by Edward Warten, Luscher was accused of disloyalty and disrespect to the flag. In this it was alleged that Luscher had been heard to utter words of disrespect to the flag, and that he had removed the American flag at the back of the bar in the saloon and had removed the flag after the use of violent language. In another affidavit, made by S. J. Eurtit, Luscher was charged with an attempt to evade the provisions of the ordinance which prohibits the sale of liquors by saloons except for consumption on the premises. In this it was charged that Luscher had advised an intending purchaser that a bottle of beer might be taken from the saloon provided it had first been opened and a portion of the contents drank.

Acting upon these charges, the trustees ordered the license of Luscher suspended forthwith and directed that he be required to appear before an adjourned meeting of the council Wednesday evening for hearing.

That the matter had excited much more than the usual public interest was evidenced by the extremely large attendance of citizens at the hearing, many being compelled to stand. It was also made evident by the trend of expression manifested in the applause that the general sentiment of those in attendance was far from favorable to Luscher.

At the hearing, Luscher was represented by attorney E. F. Fitzpatrick, who at the outset made technical objection to the hearing. This was based upon the assumption that the disloyalty, which it was claimed could not be taken as a basis for revocation of a license and which the council was without jurisdiction to either legally hear or punish.

The objection was overruled after a reading of the affidavits upon which the hearing was based. Mayor Sampson ruled that the action suspending the license was based upon the accusation of a violation of the city ordinance and that the charge of disloyalty was merely incidental.

But little in the way of new evidence against Luscher was offered, the principal witnesses being Warten and Eurtit, who repeated the charges made in the affidavits. Warten testified that on the occasion mentioned, which was about the middle of last month, while he was on duty as barkeeper in the saloon, and during the absence of Luscher, he had placed an American flag on the back bar. When Luscher returned he demanded that Warten remove the flag and that when this demand met with refusal, Luscher himself removed the flag. It was also charged that during the discussion Luscher had used rather violent language.

In the affidavit of Eurtit, it was testified that at a prior date, after a barkeeper in the place had refused to permit a customer to carry a bottle of beer from the place, Luscher had interfered and told the purchaser that if the bottle was first opened and a portion of its contents drank the remainder might be taken out of the saloon.

Cross examination by attorney Fitzpatrick considerably weakened this testimony, which was developed that the witness did not see this liquor carried from the premises. As a matter of fact, the testimony of Eurtit showed that he had left the place before the purchaser of the beer and consequently knew nothing of its final disposition.

Beyond these two witnesses the testimony against Luscher was not material to the case at issue, being confined to acts of supposed disloyalty occurring some months previous to this time. This brought out the fact that Luscher had declined to contribute to the funds for the local entertainment of the departing draft contingent and had so far he had not become the owner of either a Liberty Bond or war savings certificate.

Testifying in his own behalf, Luscher denied that he had shown disrespect for the flag. That he had removed the flag from where it had been placed behind the bar he admitted, but he admitted that this was due mainly to the fact that this particular flag had become soiled and faded from previous use and that he did not consider it an ornament to the place. He denied that the purchaser of the beer in question had been permitted to take it from the premises, but insisted that the bottle had merely been taken into the room in the rear of the saloon used as a lounge room. While admitting that he had not so far contributed to the government war loans, he denied any spirit of disloyalty and affirmed that he had never expressed disrespect for the flag.

With the closing of the testimony the trustees declined a discontinuation to take final action without further enlightenment. While it was plain that they did not consider that the evidence sustained the charges to the extent of justifying the revocation of the license, they were far from satisfied of the entire innocence of Luscher. In giving expression to this feeling, Trustee Merrill suggested that an opportunity be taken for a more full investigation by the trustees. For some time past, he said, he had heard Luscher's conduct severely criticized upon the streets and that if there were to act upon the information thus gained he would be ready to vote for the revocation of the license at this time. This, however, was not in line with his duty as an official, which demanded that action be taken solely upon evidence presented in an official manner. In the opinion of Trustee Merrill, much of the present agitation against the saloon was due to the misconduct of a few of the proprietors of these places. If the saloons were to be permitted to continue at all, they must be in the hands of men who had evidenced a respect for the laws of their country.

Trustee McNulty suggested that under the law Luscher had a right to be presumed to be innocent until he had been proven guilty and that for this reason it was not just that he be deprived of the right to do business upon suspicion, no matter how strong that may be. Following this suggestion, a motion was offered by Trustee Merrill that further hearing of the charges be continued until the date of the next regular meeting and that in the meantime the order of suspension of the license be revoked and Luscher permitted to reopen his saloon. This motion was carried without a dissenting vote.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH DEDICATES SERVICE FLAG

A service flag was dedicated Sunday evening with appropriate ceremonies at the Congregational church of this city, in honor of its 27 lads who have answered the call of Uncle Sam. The principal speakers of the evening were District Attorney Arthur M. Free of San Jose. He was introduced by District Attorney Franklin Swart. In behalf of the Ladies' Circle, Miss Thelma Knox presented the flag which represents the following young men: Dudley Pitcher, Edwin Pitcher, William Bodensky, Lindsay Wilson, George Bettin, Kenneth Rice, James Nance, Merion Knox, Glenn Wilson, Arthur Lamb, Duncan Fitzgerald, John McCrea, Philip Fox, Robert Fox, Chester Kirkpatrick, Christian Uhlenberg, Wilbur Dossie, Norman Mackenzie, Charles Walther, Guy Bloomquist, Peter Christensen, Andrew Stewart, George Christensen, Lloyd Thrush, Charles McCracken, Sidney Mackenzie and Roderick Heydenfeldt.

The talkers were John G. Miller, one of the staff of speakers sent out by the liberty loan committee of San Francisco to awaken the citizenship of California to the dire results that may follow failure on the part of the people to properly realize the needs of the government, and Lieutenant J. S. Dagger of the famous 29th Canadian battalion who has just returned to this country invalided after a service of a year in the trenches. Miller, who is a gifted talker, gave a history of the war, briefly but forcibly pointing out the perfidy of the Kaiser, his utter regard of pledges and treaties. He told of the German's recent treachery in Russia, declaring that it was on a par with the raiding of Belgium and the devastating campaign in France and in a stirring appeal urged the big audience to remember that they had a duty to perform, a duty every bit as exacting as that demanded of the troops sent over.

Lieutenant Dagger described his experiences in the front line trenches, vividly portraying the bravery of the French and British soldiery at Ypres, Messines Ridge and the Somme, where they were poorly equipped and outnumbered ten to one. As an active participant in this battle he declared that the struggle in the early months of the war was like a battle between a highly trained baseball team and bush leaguers.

MOSQUITO EXTERMINATION WELL UNDER WAY.

It is evident that the mosquito season is approaching very rapidly. Day after day for the last two months we have noticed the crew of the Pulgas Mosquito Abatement District at work here and there about our large marsh area.

Since the first of March inspectors have been working from place to place, inspecting back yards and vacant lots, etc., for breeding places such as: old cans, bottles, barrels, cesspools, wells, tanks, troughs and anything that will hold water, for all such receptacles are the finest kind of mosquito breeders. These inspectors have followed up their work very closely with the oiling crew, which has oiled several of the badly infested ditches, creeks, and cesspools.

Our superintendent, Thurlow L. Murray, wants the people, and especially the ranchers or farmers, to know that the oils which they use are not poisonous nor do they use poisons of any description in their work. He also asks one and all to co-operate with him in the great task of exterminating the mosquito. Not only does it mean protection and comfort to the residents of our entire district, but to the many thousands of soldiers at Camp Fremont.

SECOND TRIAL RESULTS IN ACQUITTAL OF PETER LERA

Peter Lera, charged with the murder of August Schmidt at South San Francisco on September 22d of last year, was acquitted by a jury of men and women in the superior court Tuesday night. The case went to the jury at 3:45 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and the verdict was announced at 6:30, after the jury had deliberated more than two hours and a half. Thomas C. Cochran of Menlo Park was foreman of the jury.

This was the second trial of the Lera case, the jury at the first trial failing to agree, seven voting for acquittal and five for conviction.

It is understood that at the last trial before a decision was reached, the jury stood 11 for conviction and one for manslaughter.

J. J. Bullock, who defended Lera, made a brilliant closing argument to the jury. Those who heard him say it was the best effort he ever put forth in the superior court. District Attorney Swart also made a masterly closing address.

JUDGE BUCK SUSTAINS BRITTON ESTATE OBJECTIONS

Judge Buck rendered a decision in the matter of the objections to the account recently filed by Fred Kendall, special administrator of the estate of N. J. Britton, deceased, yesterday. There were sixteen objections to the account. The court allowed all but 2, 13 and 15. Number 2 was the claim of Mrs. E. C. Swanton for cleaning, amounting to $17.75. No. 13, the claim of J. F. Jewell & Co. for insuring property amounting to $358.30 and No. 15 the claim for expenses in compiling inventory of property amounting to $75. These items were stricken from the account.

The account as filed by Fred Kendall showed the total receipts to be $1571.86 and total disbursements $1298.68, leaving a balance of $273.18. The deductions ordered by the court will reduce the receipts to $1120.81.

Helen Curran Goes "Over There." Miss Helen Curran, youngest daughter of the late James Curran and sister of Roy Curran of this city, will leave on March 20th for France to care for a large number of Belgian children. Miss Curran is a professional nurse, having graduated from the Children's Hospital in San Francisco a few years ago. She possesses a gentle and kind disposition and will be quite a favorite with the Belgian waifs.

LIBERTY LOAN WORKERS DISCUSS DEMANDS OF WAR WORK

Crowding the Sequoia theater to the doors Thursday night the people of Redwood City heard the war discussed in a manner that sent them home feeling that this country was indeed engaged in a titanic struggle, one that would tax the country to the utmost and call upon the active participation of everyone. The speakers were not pessimistic; neither were they overly optimistic. They were simply aware of the necessity existing for the strongest co-operation and they expressed themselves in strong forcible language, every word of which went home.

The talkers were John G. Miller, one of the staff of speakers sent out by the liberty loan committee of San Francisco to awaken the citizenship of California to the dire results that may follow failure on the part of the people to properly realize the needs of the government, and Lieutenant J. S. Dagger of the famous 29th Canadian battalion who has just returned to this country invalided after a service of a year in the trenches. Miller, who is a gifted talker, gave a history of the war, briefly but forcibly pointing out the perfidy of the Kaiser, his utter regard of pledges and treaties. Lieutenant Dagger described his experiences in the front line trenches, vividly portraying the bravery of the French and British soldiery at Ypres, Messines Ridge and the Somme, where they were poorly equipped and outnumbered ten to one. As an active participant in this battle he declared that the struggle in the early months of the war was like a battle between a highly trained baseball team and bush leaguers.

"Germany," he said, "had trained for the battle for 30 years and had everything necessary to make a winning team. The allies had nothing, practically, but a willingness to fight and the knowledge that they were fighting a battle for civilization. If the Germans could not win under such conditions, how is it possible for them to win now when we are on better than an equal footing, with the advantage with the allies? You need not worry about the western front; the Kaiser's forces will not break through."

Dagger scored all pacifist talk and warned particularly against pro-Germans and the I. W. W.

"Clean them out of your communities," he urged. "Show them no leniency. This is no time to pray for peace. There is only one way to get peace and that is to fight for it. Britain, France and the United States can and will do it but they must have the support of the people who have to stay at home."

The meeting was the seventh of the series of educational and patriotic gatherings arranged by the Liberty Council of Redwood City. Douglas S. Watson presided opening the meeting with a brief address on the part food conservation will play in the war.

MYSTERY FIRE DESTROYS PROPERTY OF P. J. FOLEY

A barn belonging to P. J. Foley on Jefferson street was totally destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon. Before the fire department arrived the flames had enveloped the building and it crumbled, the fire boys being unable to save it. The contents were also burned. A valuable horse owned by Mr. Foley burned in the raging flames. A survey, harness and farming utensils were likewise destroyed. The barn was erected many years ago and was valued at $2000. It was partly insured. The origin of the fire is wrapped in mystery. Mrs. Foley was in San Francisco and no one was at home. This was the third attempt to burn the structure. It has been suggested that the blaze was started by children playing there but this is scouted by the officers who are investigating the case. Several persons are under suspicion by the sheriff's office. Arrests may be made at any moment.

FINAL REPORT OF GUARDIAN.

Jas. T. O'Keefe, as guardian of the estate of Bertha L. Bradley, who was formerly known as Bertha L. Winkler, has filed in the superior court his final settlement and report as Guardian. The account shows that there is on hand since last settlement $4,983.37; cash received since $469.93; the amount paid out in connection with the estate is $195.22, leaving on hand a cash balance of $5,258.08; real estate appraised at $1666.66 and personal property appraised at $25.00, making the total amount of estate and property on hand $6,949.74. Some few weeks ago Mrs. Bradley was restored to competency, and no longer needs a guardian. Mr. O'Keefe has been the guardian for the past five years.

MENLO PARK PEOPLE TO HONOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Irish folk song, wit and humor; that is how the ad reads. But who ever heard of any ad doing justice to the annual St. Patrick's Day celebration given in the Hall of the Nativity, Menlo Park. Enquiries by mail and by phone have already come in numbers from San Francisco, San Mateo, Redwood and in fact, from every part of the peninsula as to the date of the show at Menlo this year. And the boys in khaki who too have a 'drop of the red blood' in them and an enthusiasm for the land of their fathers on whose centuries' long gloom a light is beginning to dawn this blessed St. Patrick's Day of 1918. And the men and women whom the years have touched and silvered, but whose memories like their lives began on the 'old sod itself,' and who love, every returning year, to sit of an evening and listen again to the old songs and have their tired feet irresistibly move to the lil of the old music and have their hearts stirred with the old folk song and their spirits brightened with the wit and humor the like of which could come from no other place under the sun but Ireland. All these—all alike are asking on what evening is the entertainment to be. Well! here you are. It will be next Friday, evening, the evening of the 15th of March and no other. And it will be in the Hall of the Nativity, Menlo Park, and it will begin at 8:30 o'clock and the program and what is to come after it will end only when the day ends, at midnight. And the songs will be the songs you know, but sung as you never heard them outside of Ireland. And the feet of the dancers will rival the lil of the beloved old music, and the colleens will be there, and her bou-chal will be there. And the invitation is not to this one or that one, but is the hearty old time Irish 'Come all ye.'

CITIZENS PETITION FOR SUBMISSION OF SALOON QUESTION TO VOTERS

Unless the work of verification by City Clerk W. A. Price results in the elimination of an unusually large number of signatures to the initiative petition presented to the city council at its regular meeting last Monday evening, and this seems hardly probable from the large excess number of signatures obtained, it is more than probable that the question of saloon or no saloon in Redwood City will be put up to the voters at the coming municipal election. While action on the petition was not possible because of legal limitations, the disposition evinced by the trustees would seem to indicate that no other than legal objections would be found to prevent this.

The petition for the submission of an initiative ordinance barring the saloon from this city after July 1st was presented for filing with the city clerk by C. M. Dossie, who for the information of the trustees quoted several sections of the state law governing this procedure. From this it became evident that action by the council at this meeting would not be possible, from the fact that before the petition can be legally presented the signatures must be verified by the city clerk who must certify that it contains the required number of legally qualified signers. This will be done and if found sufficient the petition will come up for final action at the next regular meeting.

With all of the trustees present considerable in the way of purely routine business was disposed of. A communication from George H. Irving called the attention of the council to the dangers to travel at the intersection of the State Highway and Broadway and suggested that public safety demanded the stationing of a traffic officer at this point, especially during times of unusual congestion. The suggestion met with approval and City Marshal Coleman was instructed to report at the next meeting the best plan for providing for a traffic officer on Sundays and holidays.

A committee of Morvin Grove, U. A. O. D., presented a petition for a permit to hold the annual dance of the Grove at Foresters hall on the evening of April 20th, asking that they be permitted to continue the dance until 3 o'clock in the morning. As the council had previously gone on record as opposed to the granting of permits for dances to continue later than midnight, action on the petition was deferred until the next meeting.

The ordinance providing for the holding of the municipal election, April 8th was adopted.

M. E. Ryan and D. R. Stafford, a committee of the Liberty Council of this city, asked for and were granted a permit to erect a pole at the intersection of Broadway and Main street for the purpose of calling public attention to the progress of the campaign for the sale of thrift stamps and war saving certificates.

Following the acceptance of right-of-way deeds, City Clerk Price was directed to advertise for bids for the construction of the sewer to connect the factory district with tide water. At the suggestion of Trustee Tuchen it was decided, for the encouragement of vegetable growers, to allow a reduction of 25 per cent from the usual rates for all water consumed above the minimum rate of $1, this to be effective from March 1st.

It was ordered that a street light be installed on Hudson street between Hopkins avenue and Brewster street. City Marshal Coleman reported the collection of $1661.11 during the past month. Of this sum, $1172.45 was for water rates.

PIONEER TEACHER HAD HIS TRIALS

We had watched the salmon wriggle out of the sea up the sand-riffles of the paring Pilgrimage. We had plucked poppies of the richest gold from emerald meadows. We had loll on the warm white winnows of the Half Moon beach. Yet even these restful charms lost luster in the gladsome greetings and seaside stories of the grizzled graybeards.

From the lips of the Grand Old Man of the Coast, Justice John Pitcher, fell this tale of trials and tribulations that befell him some fifty years ago in an effort to establish a school district for the convenient education of his expanding family. Woven into its witchery was the revelation of a frequent speculation as to why this modest little school should have borne the mystical Arabic name Tunia, and not the musical Mexican namesake of its bustling brooklet, Tunitas.

"Both Mrs. Pitcher and I had been bred and brought up in the city," said the Judge reminiscently. "We had our first taste of rural life on the little valley farm by the Tunitas Creek. A grizzly bear had been shot on our place shortly before our entry, and nervous visions of wild beasts often worried us. The late homecoming of the children from the Purissima school on evenings filled us with fears. I visited the school one morning, and found it in charge of a big man with little nerve. He held that the boys were rough and slow, and the classes had to kept late after school to accomplish anything at all. I urged that he make them do the work during regular hours, but he claimed it would be worth his life to do so. This was evident as he called the pupils in, for one boy had a pistol in his bootleg, his brother had a knife protruding from his boot, and I recognized both as the sons of a convicted gunman. The teacher gave me a nudge and a nod toward the boys wearing the weapons, and I awaited results with some eagerness.

"The teacher asked the older of the two brothers to go to the blackboard to do some work. 'I don't want to go, and I don't hafta go neither,' defiantly answered the boy. 'See that!' said the teacher in an undertone. 'Well, make him do it,' said the resolute visitor. 'Oh, no,' said the teacher, falteringly. 'Well, I'll make him,' said the guest, and instantly the young rebel received a slap in the face from an open hand accompanied with a command to get on with his work. He obeyed to the board, while his brother ran out of the school and sped for home forgetful of his armor.

The Judge at once saw that the best interests of his own boys demanded a general society and whence under a more replete management, so he set to work determinedly to secure a more convenient school. His local supervisor gave him no encouragement, but he repaired to the County seat, and obtruded his project upon the session of the supervisors. Little heed was paid to his wishes, but he repeated his visits to the sessions, becoming bolder and more insistent in his demands, even to defying the ruling of District Attorney Harvey Kincaid to keep quiet or have a charge preferred against him for disturbing the meeting. His persistency however, caught the eye of Supervisor Page, who was also having trouble to gain in the support of the Coast supervisor in the building of a road to the Page lumber mill.

"Young man," asked the friendly Supervisor, "What is it you want so seriously?"
"I wish a convenient school for my children and the children of my good neighbors," answered the petitioner, "and I am going to get it. I have to worry you fellows until Doom's Day."
"Well, young man, I'll stay with you in your fight if for no other reason than to beat out your home supervisor. I'll introduce you to my friend, the school superintendent, and we'll leave it to you and him to fix up the district. Make out a bill against the district to be set before the supervisors, and I will try to have the bill ordered paid, which action will recognize the establishment of the district."

The superintendent was met, and was quite agreeable to the formation of the district, but insisted that the young agitator should go with him to his home in Canyada, near Woodside, to fix up the matter.
Although the sun was sinking low worrying about lions and bears in the coastal cottage and the late return of her helpmate, yet the new school must be won at any hazard. The two school men repaired to the official's rig, and the superintendent who was fond of his grog, stepped in to the old Pryor corner and had his little blue water keg filled with the strongest stock in the saloon. Upon reaching the rig, the young farmer noticed that its two rear wheels were of unequal diameter, but he seated himself beside the driver, leading his own saddle-horse behind the wagon. The unequal driving-wheels of the vehicle, however, kept wobbling the faithful high horse. Roderick, into the brush that lined the roadway, frequently requiring the animal to be led back into the road. So distracted was the driver over the strange conduct of his faithful horse that he had to seek composure in frequent quaff at the spigot. His young companion refused to partake of the beverage, until the displeased school official demanded a better fellowship, else the school proposition would be abandoned. This threat overcame the young man's temperance resolution, despite the warning edge that he could never drink from a spigot and that this would be the third indulgence of his life—the first having been taken in New Orleans to avoid water suspected of the fever germ, and the second, the crossing through a desert country that embittered its waters with alkali. For the sake of the school, John resolved to be more companionable to the high school authority by joining him in a whiff at the spigot. As he feared, he made a miserable mess of it, for little of the liquor passed along its intended channel, but instead pervertedly streamed down his shirt front and coat-sleeve, making him "smell like a distillery."

The mountain domiella was reached at dark, the school boundaries agreed upon, and a bill made out against the school stripping for an imaginary load of wood. When it came to filling in the blank spaces, the tipsy toast-master asked with a Celtic flourish, "The name." "What shall be the name of this bairn?"
The farmer's fancy at once became full of the tuncful murmuring of the brook that drained the district, and again of the tuncful Spanish name, prompting him to cry out, "Tunias! Tunitas, the land of little sea-apples!"
"Tunias, yes, Tunias!" responded the superintendent. "It's a wonderful land in Africa; that land of pirates and pirates that made the world pay pillage for generations!"
The farmer was dismayed to think that this realm of beauty and peace, this land of honest, frugal toil should bear the name of a region of lawless robbers. He expostulated, but the more he objected, the more enthusiastically grew the school man over his historical booklore and the more stoutly insisted that it should bear the name "Tunias." "Think, said he, 'how we shall honor Prebble and De-catur and the first great exploit of the American navy, when, although a baby nation yet, we whipped into the latest submission these fierce robbers of the sea!'" The superintendent asserted our great American doctrine as voiced by the immortal Pinckney, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute!"

The young tiller of the soil bowed his head in recognition of this fervid recital of American triumph and glory, but as his patriotic awe subsided, his beloved Irish Ridge and his trusty tillers resolved upon the figment of fancy into the rugged mountains of African pirates, and the world on his shoulders, while his frugal neighbors became troops of fiery pirates with scythes transformed into keen-edged scimitars, prompting John to again cry out "Name it Tunias, the true and tuncful Tunias!"
The superintendent, however, insisted upon having his historical fantasy recorded in the school annals of the county, and, fearing the perversion of his pet project, John yielded, with the compulsory conclusion that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," while he pictured himself in effigy by his fellow farmers should they learn that he had labeled them and their homes a community of African pirates. So the blanks were filled in with Tunia, and the bill was signed as a charge against the "Tunias School District."

On parting from the Canyada retreat of the superintendent, it was midnight of a dark, stormy night, and John mounted his saddle-horse and was about to hurry homeward on the zig-zag roadway through King's, but the plausible school official prevailed upon him to take a short cut along a narrow trail over the mountains past Borden's Mill. To save time, already sadly wasted, John ascended the dark and narrow pathway, along which the intrusive brush cut many a vicious scratch across his features, from which the blood flowed profusely down his neck and beard clothing. A female coyote resented his intrusion upon her lair and litter, and sprang at his horse, terrifying that faithful animal into a wild side lunge off the trail, throwing John to the ground and hurling his hat far into the thicket below. Mounting his horse again, hatless and gory, he reached his home just at the peep of day and rapped faithfully on his door, only to receive the "most unkindest cut of all" from his loving spouse, who cautiously opened the door after a weary night of worry and watching.

Upon seeing her youthful idol marked and mangled and blood-stained, she cried out in deeper despair, "John, John! how could you do it? I smell whiskey on you John. Why did you stay out so late, drinking rotgut and scurraging with your wild-cat companion? Hurry in, wash your face, and change your clothes, and go to bed before the children wake to see their father in such a plight!"
In vain John tried to gainsay the glaring evidence of his all-night spree his faithful spouse suspected. Even this had to be borne, however, for the success of his pet project, the school district. He felt like making another effort to redeem his name, but he feared another legal quibble before the supervisors, so he relieved his conscience by delivering a load of wood on the little flat whereon the school now stands, and the supervisors recognized and approved the bill as charge against the new "Tunias School District."

The earliest life of the district brought many a care to John as one of its trustees, in that he had to collect and contribute often to the meager appropriations cover a six months' term under nery male teachers. The Judge still feels a quaim of regret for the name he imposed upon his beloved school bairn; and, if the people still living there and Roy Cloud and the supervisors should be inclined to favor the movement, John Pitcher is ready to work out his penance by initiating steps to change the mystical Arabic Tunia to the truer and tuncful Tunitas, the land of little sea-apples.

Father Brockage is an eloquent pulpit orator, a devout priest, possessing splendid executive ability and an attractive manner. The Holy Cross parish is one of the largest and most important in San Francisco.

Rev. Joseph F. Moisan, C. S. V. and Chaplain of the 62d began last Wednesday evening in the Church of The Nativity, a series of discourses to be continued next Wednesday evening and the Wednesday evening following. His coming subjects are: "The Habit of Evil and the Deadly Member." Those who listened to his discourse of Wednesday night were stirred to the depth. The Rev. gentleman has a real message to deliver and delivers it in a most eloquent and forceful manner. The Wednesday evening devotions begin at 7:45 o'clock.

The new social hall and auditorium of the Presbyterian church was dedicated with impressive services Tuesday night. Dr. Sibley of San Francisco said that the camp should be called the "Churchside Camp," rather than the church, "The Campside Church," as the church was on the ground many years before the camp was thought of. Attorney McNab of San Francisco gave the dedicatory address. The church federation was represented by Rev. B. C. Preston of the community service commission, who gave a brief congratulatory address.

The general war board of the Presbyterian church donated $3000 for the new building. It is nicely equipped as a gymnasium, reading room and reception hall.

James McClure and wife came here from Washington, D.C. last week and after a search of two years found their cousin, W. A. Carnduff, the well-known Ravenswood farmer who has fallen heir to a large fortune in Australia. Mr. McClure, his brother and Mr. Carnduff are the only heirs to the estate of J. McClure who died in Australia over three years ago, leaving an estate consisting of diamond mines and real estate valued at upwards of a million dollars.

The administrator of the estate has been searching the country for the past two years for Mr. Carnduff but was unable to find him. The matter was placed in the hands of the other heirs at Washington and they knowing that their aunt, the late Mrs. Carnduff had come to California in the sixties, began an investigation to find the whereabouts of her son. Mr. McClure after coming to San Francisco soon learned of the residence of the missing heir. The estate will soon be settled, as it is ready for distribution, the signature of Mr. Carnduff only being needed to divide the property.

Mr. McClure and his sister, Mrs. Carnduff, came from Ireland to California early in the sixties, the brother settling in Menlo Park. Mr. McClure went to the mines and soon became wealthy, investing his fortune in real estate he became one of the big financiers and wielded a large power in Melbourne. Mrs. Carnduff passed away at her home at Ravenswood five months ago at the age of 100 years.

W. A. Carnduff is not "fused up" over the big fortune he is soon to receive. He will pursue the even tenor of his way, taking all the joy out of life he can. He is one of the most expert duck hunters in the state and during the winter months spends much of his time hunting the elusive teal and coy mallard on the local marshes. Mr. Carnduff has two sons in the army, one of whom is now in France.

PRESIDENT WILSON SAYS:
"The Public Utility Companies Must be Kept Up."

Replying to a letter from Secretary McAdoo in which he calls President Wilson's attention to the financial crisis at present threatening the public utilities companies, the President says:

"I fully share the views you express regarding the importance of the public service as a part of our national equipment, especially in war time. It is essential that these utilities be maintained at their maximum efficiency and that everything reasonably possible should be done with that end in view.

"I hope that the State and local authorities, where they have not already done so, will, when the facts are properly laid before them, respond properly to the necessities of the situation. I shall be glad to have you communicate with the local authorities whenever the information in your possession suggests that such a course is desirable and in the national interests."
